The temperature was in the teens but with little wind, shooting was quite comfortable. Everyone just stepped back a bit so keep their hands in the warm zone. Tom having shoulder issues used his Bullseye Hammerli to shoot the match left handed. He still did well and got better each series. Just can't keep a good guy done. After the match, Tom and Rob Peterson set in a furnace for the east half of the shooting house. Now the gas needs hooking up and electric run along with the duct work and we will have heating capacity for the entire shooting house. As it stands now, the temp on the climate controlled side was almost in the high 50's toward the end of the match. Now for the end of December with outdoor temps in the teens. that is the good life.

The target stands are frozen in at 50 yards to accommodate the small bore shooters. We therefore used 50 yard targets rather than 50 meter targets just stuck in the snow leaning up against the rifle stands. It seemed to work out given we had little wind. With wind however, we will need bungee cords to hold the stands.
